

The background is a solid teal color with a repeating pattern of overlapping circles in various shades of teal, creating a textured, scale-like effect. A large, white, circular graphic element is positioned on the right side, consisting of two concentric arcs that form an open circle. The word "plate" is centered in the middle of the image in a white, lowercase, sans-serif font.

PINSA comes from the Latin word meaning stretch and spread, and normally the shape is oval. Pinsa was invented before Pizza during the Old Roman Times. It is more easily digestible than Pizza due to its different dough hydration; it contains more water in the dough, less flour, less carbohydrates and fat.
