

DRINKING HOUSE

for the discerning

What if Prohibition started today?

This is the question that triggered the concept and development of The Other Room. Inspired by the darkness of the Prohibition Era, we are the shining result of what would happen if the Eighteenth Amendment was passed today.

One of a kind, The Other Room is the only place on Earth where all the spirits go through the process of finishing. A Worldwide new concept of in-house cask finished spirits. When a spirit leaves the distillery there are only 2 ways of enjoying it: either drunk straight or mixed in a cocktail.

We give you the third new way

Cask Finished Spirits

THE CASK FINISHED RUMS

Cask Finished Libations

Cask Finishing is a beautiful technique often used by some of the greatest Rum and Whisky makers around the world. For these cask finishings the most used barrels are usually PX Sherry Wine, Port or Bourbon. There are various wood effects. Sherry casks impart winery and raisin notes to a malt, and port casks even more so; Bourbon casks tend to produce soft, sweeter malts with vanilla tones and fresh wood. Here at The Other Room we have carefully selected top Rums & Whiskeys and gently made them rest inside the cuddling walls of different barrels in which we previously matured beautiful Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, Sherry Wines in order to impart subtle notes to marry the Spirit. Keep in mind that these are Rare Finishings all made in house that can only be found and drunk here. Please take note that they will come across smoother than their original counterparts with beautiful extra layers of flavours to enhance and marry the original spirit. We definitely recommend them to be enjoyed neat first, in order to truly appreciate all the different notes, and then with some drops of water to open them up.

THE OTHER ROOM SPIRITS

Whisky

In the Whisky world is very difficult to categorize the flavor profile of the whisky by region as every distillery has its own history and the way of making their products changes from one to another. Having said that there are also other factors that have come to characterize each region and country on the style of whisky production. So please take this brief explanations only as a mere guide to what each region has become known for, with the aim of guiding you through our selection.

Highlands

Bottle

The Highlands as well as the Lowlands were regions created as a result of English Taxation and the various rules that were applied to both of them. Traditionally Highland whiskies tend to be more robust, full bodied, richer and slightly sweeter than their Lowland counterparts.

Speyside

Bottle

Over half of Scotland's malt whisky distilleries can be found within this region. Speyside is undoubtedly the heart of single malt whisky distilling in Scotland. Some of the main flavours that characterize this region are honey, vanilla and fresh fruits like apricots, pear, peach, apple. These flavors play an important part in creating whiskies that are both elegant and very sophisticated.

Balvenie 14 Carribean Cask	350
Balvenie Doublewood 12	250
Glenglassaugh Evolution	290

Campbeltown

Bottle

Throughout the 19th Century Campbeltown counted more than 37 distilleries making the premier distilling town earn the name of "The Whisky Capital of the World". In recent years these whiskies have become hard to find with less than handfull of distilleries operating. The main characteristic flavours of this region are usually a prominent salinity and pungent smoke notes.

Islands

Bottle

The Islands represent a very diverse region and also one that is not strictly recognized as a region by the Scotch Whisky Association. They should be technically considered part of the Highlands. There are so many different characters to be found in them that they cannot truly be summarized. They go from gentle with hints of salinity, to more robust and deeper sweet notes, to heavily peated ones. The best way to understand it, is to try them.

Highland Park Dark Origins	390
Talisker 10	220
Machrie Moor	290

Taiwan
